Copyrighted Material

"Finally, the principles of the great Soviet School brought to light for English speakers. This is a gold mine of invaluable information for all violinists."

DANIEL PHILLIPS, Violinist, Orion String Quartet, Professor of Violin, Aaron Copland School of Music at Queens College, CUNY, Faculty, Juilliard, Mannes College of Music, and Bard College Conservatory

"The Russian Violin School presents a fascinating historical tour of the technical aspects of violin playing, including analysis of a wide variety of historical approaches used by the great violinists and teachers. It is an outstanding pedagogical resource that is invaluable as a flexible and comprehensive approach to teaching the violin."

BRENDA BRENNER, Associate Professor of Music, Indiana University Jacobs School of Music, President, American String Teachers Association

YURI YANKELEVICH (1909–1973) was one of the most important violin teachers in 20th century Russia. He taught at the Moscow Conservatory from 1936 to 1973 and nurtured a golden generation of superb violinists, including forty prize winners in international competitions. Extremely interested in the methodology of violin playing and teaching, Yankelevich contributed significant texts to the pedagogical literature, yet despite its importance, Yankelevich's scholarly work has been little known outside of Russia until now.

This book includes two original texts by Yankelevich, translated for the first time into English: his essay on positioning the hands and arms, and his extensive research into shifting positions. Additional essays and commentaries by those close to him examine tone production, intonation, vibrato, fingerings and bowings, and his general approach to methodology and selecting repertoire. An invaluable resource for any professional violinist, Yankelevich's work reveals an extremely sophisticated approach to understanding the interconnectivity of all components in playing the violin and is complete with detailed practical suggestions and broad historical context.

MASHA LANKOVSKY (translator) studied the violin with Nelli Shkolnikova, one of Yankelevich's first students to receive international recognition, and teaches at the Conservatoire de Versailles in France.
